

Tim Peake: A Biography

Tim Peake was the first British astronaut to live on the International Space Station. Tim Peake was born in Chichester, England on the seventh of April 1972. He is married and he has 2 sons, he enjoys skiing, scuba diving, cross country and climbing. He went to a high school just for boys in West Sussex and in 1992 he graduated. As a child, his mother worked as a midwife and his father was interested in historic aircrafts, he had an older sister.

Tim Peake had a lifelong fascination with flying. As a child, he wanted to go to space. In his early years, he was an officer in the British Army Air Corps, he likes aircrafts. He left after 17 years.

Tim Peake stayed in space for 6 months because he was the first British astronaut on the international space station.

Later in life, he wants to go back up to space. Tim Peake is a scientist now and he is 46.

In his final years, he is going back to the international space station. He announced he will be taking on a second Europe space Agency.

